CSRA MARKETING

FREE RESOURCE FOR ROOFING COMPANIES

The New Website Launch Checklist

35 checks to run before your new site goes live. Catch the mistakes that cost roofing companies leads every single day.

From Kemar Lawrence, Co-Founder of CSRA Marketing

Your website is your hardest-working salesperson

It works nights, weekends, and holidays. It never calls in sick. But only if it is built right.

I have reviewed a lot of roofing websites, and the expensive mistakes are almost never the design. They are the basics: the phone number buried three clicks deep, the contact form nobody tested, the title tags that say "Home" on every page. Small misses, big cost.

Whether you just paid for a new site or you are wondering if your current one is up to par, run through this checklist before you call it done. Every item has a reason attached, so you will know not just what to check, but why it matters to your bottom line.

Kemar Lawrence
Co-Founder, CSRA Marketing

> How to use this: Go section by section with the site open in front of you, ideally on your phone first. Check each box only when you have verified it yourself. If your web designer built the site, sit with them and walk through it together.

© 2026 CSRA Marketing

1 Content

- [ ] Homepage answers three questions in five seconds: what you do, where, and why you

  Why it matters: Visitors decide in seconds whether to stay. If they have to hunt for what you do or where you work, they hit the back button.

- [ ] Dedicated page for each core service (replacement, repair, gutters, inspections)

  Why it matters: One page per service lets each rank on its own in Google and speaks directly to that specific need. A single "Services" page does neither well.

- [ ] Service area pages for the main towns you serve

  Why it matters: You rank where your pages say you work. No pages for your towns means no rankings in those towns.

- [ ] About page with real team and crew photos

  Why it matters: People hire people they trust. Real photos build that trust; stock photos destroy it the moment someone notices.

- [ ] Reviews or testimonials visible on every key page

  Why it matters: Proof should never be more than one scroll away. Homeowners will not go hunting for your reviews page.

- [ ] Clear headline on every page (no clever wordplay)

  Why it matters: Clarity beats cleverness every time. "Roof Replacement in Marietta" converts. "We Cover What Matters" confuses.

- [ ] Copy written for homeowners, not contractors

  Why it matters: Your customer does not know roofing terminology. If they cannot understand it, they cannot trust it, and they will not call.

© 2026 CSRA Marketing

2 Design and User Experience

- [ ] Site looks and works great on a phone

  Why it matters: Most of your visitors are on a phone. A site that breaks on mobile is a site that loses most of its leads.

- [ ] Pages load in under three seconds on mobile

  Why it matters: Slow pages lose visitors before they ever see your offer. Every extra second costs you calls.

- [ ] Phone number visible without scrolling (sticky header or tap-to-call button)

  Why it matters: Most roofing leads start as calls. If visitors have to hunt for your number, many will just call the next roofer instead.

- [ ] One clear call to action per page

  Why it matters: Multiple competing buttons paralyze visitors. One clear action, "Call now" or "Get a free inspection," wins.

- [ ] Quote form is short (name, phone, service needed, nothing more)

  Why it matters: Every extra field drops completions. You can get the details on the call; the form just needs to start the conversation.

- [ ] Trust signals above the fold (review count, years in business, license info)

  Why it matters: Trust has to be established before the scroll. A bare hero section with just a headline converts poorly.

© 2026 CSRA Marketing

3 SEO Foundations

- [ ] Unique title tag on every page (includes the service and the town)

  Why it matters: The title tag is the strongest on-page ranking signal you control. "Home" as a title tag is a wasted opportunity on every page.

- [ ] Meta description written for every page (sells the click)

  Why it matters: This is your ad copy inside search results. A compelling description is the difference between a click and a scroll-past.

- [ ] One H1 per page, matching the page topic

  Why it matters: The H1 tells Google exactly what the page is about. Multiple or missing H1s muddy that signal.

- [ ] Schema markup in place (LocalBusiness plus reviews)

  Why it matters: Structured data helps Google understand your business and can earn star ratings in search results, which lift click rates.

- [ ] XML sitemap created and submitted to Google

  Why it matters: A sitemap makes sure Google finds every page. Without one, new or deep pages can sit invisible for weeks.

- [ ] Images compressed, with descriptive file names

  Why it matters: Huge image files slow the whole site. Descriptive names like "metal-roof-installation-marietta.jpg" also help image search.

> Red flag I see constantly: every page titled "Home | Company Name" or the business name alone on all title tags. If your designer did this, send it back. It is a five-minute fix with real ranking impact.

© 2026 CSRA Marketing

4 Tracking and Analytics

- [ ] Google Analytics installed and confirmed collecting data

  Why it matters: You cannot improve what you do not measure. Launching without analytics means flying blind from day one.

- [ ] Phone calls tracked separately from form fills

  Why it matters: Most roofing leads are calls. If you only track form fills, you are blind to the majority of your leads.

- [ ] Form submissions send instant notification emails

  Why it matters: Speed wins jobs. A lead that sits unread for a day usually becomes someone else's customer.

- [ ] Conversion goals set up (calls and forms counted as conversions)

  Why it matters: Goals separate real leads from casual browsers in your data, so you know what is actually working.

© 2026 CSRA Marketing

5 Technical

- [ ] SSL certificate active (https with the padlock showing)

  Why it matters: Browsers now warn visitors away from non-secure sites. No padlock means lost trust before the page even loads.

- [ ] Old URLs redirect properly (if this is a redesign)

  Why it matters: Skipping redirects can wipe out existing Google rankings overnight. Every old URL needs a proper home.

- [ ] Every form tested end to end (submit, receive, follow up)

  Why it matters: A form that looks fine but never delivers is worse than no form at all. It creates angry prospects who think you ignored them.

- [ ] No broken links anywhere (full site check)

  Why it matters: Broken links hurt your Google rankings and make the business look sloppy to anyone who clicks one.

- [ ] Favicon uploaded and showing in browser tabs

  Why it matters: Small detail, real professionalism signal. A missing favicon is one more thing that says "unfinished."

- [ ] 404 page is helpful (links back to homepage, services, contact)

  Why it matters: Lost visitors can still become leads. A helpful 404 page rescues traffic that would otherwise bounce.

> The one most people skip: testing the forms. I have seen roofing companies run a beautiful new site for months with a contact form that sent leads into the void. Test it yourself, from your phone, before you launch.

© 2026 CSRA Marketing

Not sure your site passes? I will check it for free.

I offer a free website audit for roofing companies. I go through your site personally against a checklist a lot like this one and tell you exactly what is costing you leads, in plain English.

No obligation, no sales pitch. If your site is solid, I will tell you that too.

Book Your Free 15-Minute Call

cal.com/csramarketing/15min

© 2026 CSRA Marketing